

G. W. Swenson has made arrangements to continue his father's blacksmith business in Binford. The advanced age and feeble health of the senior Mr. Swenson has made working at his trade rather strenuous and he decided to turn the business over to his son. Gus is a competent and industrious worker, and The Times predicts that he will make a success of the business.

Mr and Mrs Otto Wetzel and