

at 2.00 p. m.

Nels Tufteland was quite badly injured Tuesday, while cutting hay on his farm near Red Willow lake. His horses became frightened by a passing automobile, and before he could get them under control they had pulled him onto the whiffle trees in such a manner that his legs, around the ankles, received some bad cuts. He was compelled to drive them into an adjoining grain field before he could stop them.