

The highest praise is due E. D. Washburn for the excellence of the oration delivered at the hall Memorial Day. It was our purpose to publish it that all of our subscribers, many of whom reside far from here, might be able to enjoy its reading. Lack of time, however, made its insertion in this issue impossible but we shall try to give it in full next week.