

At the last meeting of the Firemen it was decided that prompt action must be taken to provide some water supply, for if a fire should break out now, the means of fighting it would be exceeding deficient. A vote was taken and every resident compelled to pay the amount of $5.00 and every business hodge $10 for the purpose of building a storm house around the large tank at the town pump and heating it. Two hundred dollars was raised the next day, but nothing further has been done; so, in case of fire, the town would be no better prepared to cope with it than before.
