

Thinking to avoid the customary shower of rice, old shoes etc., the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Kimball, drove to Colgate to board the G. N. flyer and thereby give their friends, whom are numbered by the score, the slip. But their friends were not to be cheated in this manner. So the crowd boarded the south bound train loaded with rice, old shoes, etc., together with some well worded posters, soliciting the aid of the balance of the passengers to assist in making their journey and trip as enjoyable (?) as possible. It is needless to say that the crowd felt well repaid for the trip. They returned from Colgate that afternoon by auto route.
