

While burying some trees in the pond just east of his residence last Friday evening E. J. McMahon met with an accident which caused a broken arm. He had placed some planks out in the water to walk on and after covering the trees turned to walk out and as he did so the plank on which he was standing turned under his feet and in his endeavor to save himself from stepping into the water fell with his whole weight on his left hand and in such a manner as to break the arm just above the wrist. It was certainly a most peculiar accident and it proved a very painful one. Fortunately it was his left arm.