

Old Actor is Dead.

Jule F. Switzer died Wednesday at Ray, N. D., at the home of Earl Barrington, his associate in the theatrical business, of heart failure, at the age of 56 years, after an illness extending over about four week's duration. "Old Switzer," as he was familiarly known, has been active in his profession for 30 years, the last 22 years being spent with "The Crows," the well known company who are deservedly popular not only in their own state of North Dakota, but also South Dakota and western Minnesota. No more popular or better known actor ever appeared before the public in the above named territory than he, and his personal friends, to whom he was known as "Old Switzer," are legion. At the time of his death, Mr. Switzer, together with Mr. Barrington, owned and managed "The Crows." He is survived by his wife and young son, Max. The body was shipped to What Cheer, Iowa, for burial.

Mr. Switzer was well known by Devils Lake theater-goers, he having appeared here a number of times. His death will be generally regretted by all who knew him.—Devils Lake Journal.
