

HORRIBLE!

DEATH BY GASOLINE!

Tuesday afternoon at Page while Mrs. Shue, landlady of the hotel, was destroying insects around the house with gasoline she stepped upon a match on the floor igniting the oil. Her clothes were immediately inflamed burning her in a horrible manner. Her son ran to her assistance and he too was badly burned. He inhaled the flames and gas until almost suffocated. The family summoned Drs. Scanlan and Philip and every thing possible administered to relieve the sufferers. Last report both were recovering slowly and resting as easy as could be expected under the circumstance, but Mrs. Shue's recovery is doubtful owing to her being burned so badly over two thirds of her body.

Later: A telegram arrived this morning announcing her death. The son continues to improve and hopes for his recovery are bright.
