During the sickness of Miss Ostrander Monday, Miss Kress assisted in the High School.

The attendance and punctuality in the High School are exceptionally gratifying.

The teachers report a sufficiency of vacation and are anxious to begin work again.

Unusual interest is manifest in class work and we predict a successful term.

There is a rivalry of the meritorious kind in the High School and we heartily commend it since it is a sign of life and activity.

No vocation affords such excellent opportunity for the study of human nature as that of teaching. And in fact to understand the dispositions with which we come in contact it is almost necessary to be a psychologist. Indeed they are so varying temperaments that they baffle the most skillful teacher.

Since there are many standards from which course of action and conduct are judged so there are many standards of school discipline.

What constitutes good school government? Certainly it is not perfect stillness. In that grade in which absolute quiet reigns very little progress is possible.

The care of school government lies in the spirit of love and sympathy existing between teachers and student.

The din and clang of industry are the evidence of enthusiasm and concentration of efforts and when these conditions prevail there is advancement and meritorious results.
