

School Notes.

The members of the English I class are now studying the short stories of Nathaniel Hawthorn with a view to write original short stories—rivaling those of the model author, not only in the choice of subject matter, but also in the treatment of it—thereby creating individual styles which the coming generations may consider worthy of imitation.

The results of test given to the Algebra class Friday were very satisfactory. The pupils as a class are doing good work in this subject, thus giving signs of better work every day.

The great English epic, "Paradise Lost" is receiving recognition and intelligent treatment from the Seniors—who, alone, because of their years of experience and weighty judgments, are capable of understanding so vital a subject as the, "Disobedience and Fall of Man."

It is to be regretted that some of our pupils—when visitors are present—are not only "mum" but usually "extra dry."
