

School Notes.

The sonnets composed by the members of the English III class showed that no little effort had been put forth to produce a work which might be said to rival that of some of the great masters in that and construction. John Baldwin's sonnet entitled "Baldwinian" reflects the uncomfortable feelings—the writer has—when in the dark. Edna Gray, in "Our Flag" has been very successful in giving us an impression of the depth and warmth of her patriotism. Katherine Carleton, in an apostrophe to our High School, brings home to our minds the all important service of our "Alma Mater." Emma Slingsby's description of a "Snowfall" shows that thinking not dreaming, preceded her work. The sonnets of Florence Link and Jessie White—speak for themselves.

NIAGRA FALLS.

Of all the works of nature's skillful hand,
Of all her wonders found on land or sea,
The falls of Niagra are most grand.
It's rushing waters forward swiftly flee,
As though forced onward by a mighty foe.
O'er the precipice, so steep, they tumble,
Forming treacherous whirlpools down below,
As on through gorgeous cliffs they rumble.
These, clothed in nature's garment of rich green,
Gaze at their image in the sparkling waters,
Thinking their beauty, only, is supreme;
But the hurrying torrent never loiters,
These beauties to behold, and many more,
That charm the multitude from a distant shore.

FLORENCE LINK.

MOONLIGHT ON THE WATERS.

Her mantle, Night had spread o'er the sea,
The glorious moon from above shone down,
The quiet waters spread out before me,
The moonlight silvering each wave on the crown.
The breeze whispered softly, and gently did creep,
As fearing to waken the babes of the deep.
There was no sound but the moan of the tide,
As the sea its relentless boundries defied,
When the water's still flow was impeded,
As the waves met the shore and receded.
Across the waste of waters the moonlight
Shone, a silver path, glittering bright;
On either side of this the gloom was deep,
Dark waters where grim dangers seem to sleep.

JESSIE WHITE

Those having perfect spelling lessons during last week are as follows:

SECOND GRADE

Jakie Fullmer, William Hanley, Teddie Reynolds, Grace Lunding, Doris Tillotson, Zelma Moores.

THIRD GRADE

Earl Cassels, Hazel Ward, Lyle Bowen, Paul Roney.

FOURTH GRADE

Helen Baker, Ethel Couron, Earl Jefferson, Ina Jefferson, Grace Harness, Grace Hazlett.

Willow Lake

The following pupils in School No. 2 had perfect spelling lessons last week:

Annie Nybo.
Albert Npbo.

The following pupils were not absent last week:

Louie Johnson.
Albert Nybo.
Annie Nybo.
Lilly Clark.
Carl Nybo.
Edith Dodd.