
Lost A Finger

While working around the circular saw at his wood yard last Saturday, J. A. Klovstad met with a serious accident. He stumbled and fell toward the saw and in order to save himself he threw his hand into the saw, cutting off the first finger of his left hand and severely lacerating the hand. It was feared for a time that it might be necessary to amputate the second finger but it seems now that it may be saved. It was a close call and John was lucky in getting off without further injury.
