

Sornson=Williams

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Williams was the scene of a very pretty wedding Wednesday afternoon when their daughter, Elsa, was united in marriage with Mr. M. D. Sornson. Rev. Hitchcock read the service in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends.

Miss Patten played the wedding march, which was from a composition of one of the old masters, and promptly at two o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor, Miss Ingison and Mr. Samuel Sornson brother of the groom, who were the attendants, preceeding the bride and groom.

The bride was beautifully dressed in white net over white batiste and carried bride roses. Miss Ingison was tastefully dressed in white wool batiste and carried pink roses. The bride groom and best man wore the customary black.

The parlor was trimmed in white snow drops with green foliage and with a beautiful arch made of ferns, smilax and carnations, which hung between the parlor and dining room, under which the bridal party stood. The dining-room and table were done in pink carnations and ferns. A delicious lunchion daintily served followed immediatily after the ceremony.

The newly married couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts consisting of silver, linen, cut glass and many other things, of all which testified to the high regard in which they stand and to the good will of their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Sornson left amid a shower of rice, on a short wedding trip; Mrs. Sornson looking very sweet and dainty in her delicate tan traveling suit of chiffon panama, with all details in perfect accord.

They will be at home after July 17, at Milton N. Dak.
