

A man working for Alex. Stewart, in Steele county, attempted suicide last Thursday by cutting his throat with a jack-knife. His name was George Core, a transient. He was working in a field and walked off by himself, and was discovered soon after lying by a shock in a serious condition. When discovered, he was in Griggs county, and Coroner Westley was summoned, together with Deputy Sheriff Jones. On their arrival, they found that he had been moved back to Steele county, and that they had nothing to do with the case, and the injured man was turned over to the Steele county authorities. Dr. Westley says it is a case of temporary insanity, and he thinks that the man will recover.
