

The Misses Mabel Francis, Jessie Lindgren and Edith Howden narrowly escaped asphyxiation by coal gas last Monday morning. They were sleeping at the home of David Gorthy who is away from home, and it is presumed that something went wrong with the stove. Mr. Turnipseed had been looking after the stove during vacation and the girls came back Sunday. Monday morning Mr. Turnipseed went over to the house and discovered their condition. Jessie Lindgren was unconscious and the other two so sick that they did not know what the matter was. They have all about recovered but will not forget their experience for some time to come. It was a narrow escape and a lucky thing that Mr. Turnipseed went over to the house that morning.