

While sinking a well on the Ward farm northeast of town A. W. Greenwood discovered a relic that no doubt would be very interesting and valuable were its history known. It was an old muzzle loading pistol such as was used many years ago and was no doubt carried by a soldier when the troops were in the state quelling the Indian uprisings in the early days.