

While oiling his windmill the other day W. I. Warrey came near losing his life. His clothing caught in the cogs and he would have surely met an awful death but for the timely arrival of help.