

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education held last week it was decided to install a first-class and up-to-date fan system of ventilation. The putting in of this plant will mean an outlay of about $1200 but the Courier considers it the best investment that the board could make. Nothing is so hard on the student than a poorly ventilated schoolroom which is responsible for much of the poor health of the scholars. We are pleased that the board has taken this step and every patron of the school who has children attending the school will be glad with us. The board has already advertised for bids and it is hoped the new plant will be installed this fall.
