

After being shut down for nearly a month the Piatt-Electric Co. turned on the current last Monday night from their new power plant. For three months the company has been at work installing their new plant and we believe that they have a very good one now and one that will do the business. The people of the town have been getting impatient of late for the lights and are no doubt feeling in a better frame of mind, that they are turned on. A number of our business men have been investing in gas plants and others are thinking some of doing so. To those we would ask them to re-consider. The electric light company has put about twenty thousand dollars, which is a big lot of money, into the plant. They are citizens of the town and no business man is in favor of seeing another go down without giving him a fair trial. We will admit that the company has been slack in getting this plant installed and has put the people to considerable annoyance, but that is over and the new plant running. Let everybody help the company make the business a success so long as the company will do the right thing by them—and we think they will. The plant is well installed, they have better water for operation and there would seem to be no good reason why everything should not now run smoothly after a few minor fixings have been put to rights.
