

An Appreciation

Touching Tribute Paid to The Memory of Mrs. Mabel Hatfield Loreaux.

I knew her well from her earliest childhood. The twenty-eight years and nine months seemed all too short a career for the splendid promises wrapped up in her life. She possessed in rare combination, the loving qualities of a gentle nature and the forceful vigor of a strong and well balanced mentality. She was the light and life of every circle of which she formed a part.

The home of her childhood and young woman life bore conclusive testimony to these characteristics. The beautiful flowers which shrouded and sweetened her last resting place spoke more eloquently than words or tears the love and esteem of school friends and companions.

What shall I say of the five holy, happy years of married life? Here we bow and uncover in the presence of the holy of holies. Home ties severed, childhood and youth's attachments broken off, goodbyes spoken to the bonds of kindred, the back turned on the quiet, beautiful country residence of father, mother, sister, brother endeared by many loving memories and tender associations—all freely given up and sacrificed for the love of husband and the building up of a new home in the faraway Dakotas. How we were entertained by and enjoyed the cheery letters which came from the new and far western home. All friends were remembered, but the busy activities of the new life forbade frequent communications. Not so with father and mother by the family fireside. Not one week passed in all the five years, which did not bring letters, burning with love and affection to warm and brighten the dear old home. Ah, how those tender missive will be kept and cherished. From them the little Robert and Margaret, who will never know the love of mother nor the sacrifice she made for them, may learn in the grown up years the beautiful character of that mother with the angels.

O, if I could paint the picture of that May afternoon we laid her away in the restful grave land on the hill! As though the tears of love could not tell the full story of our grief, the heavens gently wept on the flower enshrouded casket while the voice of a former pastor proclaimed in sympathetic tone, "Let not your hearts be troubled ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you that where I am ye may be also" and from the boughs of an overhanging tree nearby, came back in sad, sweet refrain the pathetic cooings of a turtle dove.

Farewell, Mabel! Thou canst not return to us but we shall go to thee. Farewell, farewell.

SINCLAIR J. HATFIELD.
