

Albert Ness, a young man working for Joseph Stengele, met with a bad accident on Wednesday night of last week. He was trying to get onto the sidewalk at Erick Erickson's livery barn with a load of hay. The wagon wheels on one side did not get onto the walk and the load tipped over, young Ness being thrown heavily to the stone sidewalk. He received a severe concussion of the brain and for four hours was in an unconscious condition. Dr. Almklov attended to his wants. He has so far recovered that he has been able to get around again. It was certainly a nasty fall and a lucky escape from serious injury.
