

School Notes.

School opened Monday with the usual excitement and good school spirit.

The High School was pleased to welcome three new students—Harold and Kenneth Hyde and Carleton Arestad.

Leo Stevens, Willie Moffatt and Walter Breckheimer have returned and are once more at work in their classes.

The blackboards of the Laboratory have been repainted, making them more useful to both teachers and pupils.

It was found necessary on account of the increased attendance to add new seats both in High School and the grades.

Monday morning Edith Howden, Mabel Francis and Jessie Lingren had a serious time with gas. They were almost overcome, when Edith and Mabel, by some good fortune, were awakened and managed to get to the open air. They called Mrs. Turnipseed to their assistance, and, when they comprehended the danger, they called Mr. Turnipseed and lent their efforts to reviving Jessie who had received a larger dose than the other two. The girls are improving and we shall be glad to see them back in school again.

Prof. Squires, of the University, visited the school Tuesday morning and while here listened to the class of English III, and gave them an interesting talk, after which he spoke to the High School.

After ten weeks' experience in teaching Mary Koch is once more a student; glad to be back to her studies.

There are at present thirty enrolled in the High School and twenty-five in the eighth grade.

Mabel Taft, Tena Regnar and Ella Nelson have not yet returned to their work in the High School.
