

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Westley who went down to St. Louis with their infant child some two or three weeks ago, returned home last Thursday and the little boy died the following day at 6 p. m. Infantile paralysis was the cause of the child's death, and it had been a sufferer with that dread disease for several months. It was taken to St. Louis to be treated by specialists but continued to fail right along and the grief stricken parents barely got back home with the child alive. Mr. and Mrs. Westley have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.
