

Simultaneously with the return of Miss Maud Longfellow from her visit to Cooperstown, N. D., last week came the announcement of her approaching marriage to Mr. T. A. Thompson, a prominent young business and professional man of Cooperstown. The wedding of these young people will occur in this city on April 7th. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs., Walter Longfellow gave up housekeeping last fall and went to the Commercial hotel for the winter. The wedding of their daughter will occur in the apartments occupied by the family at the hotel, and the affair will be a modest event. The guests will include only the relatives and a small company of close friends of the contracting parties. The bride is one of Wadena's fairest daughters, she is an especially winsome and attractive young woman, possessing many charms and graces, and with all so sensible and domestic as to make her an ideal life partner for the fortunate young man who has won her hand and heart. The announcement of her approaching marriage was joyfully received by her many friends of the younger social circle in which she moved and they have hastened to extend their hearty congratulations. The prospective groom is a rising young attorney of Cooperstown, where he also conducts a prosperous real estate business in connection with his law practice. He stands high in the estimation of the people of Cooperstown, and is regarded as one of the most prosperous professional men of that thriving North Dakota village.—Wadena Pioneer Journal.
