

For several years the Arcade hotel in this city has been closed. Early this past summer Mr. Andrew O. Burseth, of Warren, Minn., purchased the property and decided to renovate it and put it in first-class shape and to reopen it to the public. The Courier scribe went over to the Andrews Tuesday to see what had been done and how it had been done. We found the entire inside of the building had been repainted and papered up in first class style. All the bed rooms had been equipped with entirely new and sanitary furniture. Iron bedsteads, substantial mattresses and good bed linen have been furnished and everything done to make it first-class. Downstairs the dining room is very neat and attractive and the office is large and comfortable. In the kitchen which is also neat and well furnished, Mr. Burseth has a first-class cook and proposes to give his patrons up-to-date and substantial meals. It is the intention of the proprietor to cater to the traveling men and furnish them with all the comforts possible to be obtained. As soon as he can get it done, the proprietor of The Andrews will have the outside repainted and fixed up. The Courier is pleased to see the improvements made to this hotel, and we also believe that Mr. Burseth will receive considerable patronage. He has certainly made good in fixing up which is a distinct improvement over the old condition of things. Mr. Burseth has spent a lot of money and taken considerable chance in doing what he has done to The Andrews and we hope he will realize a handsome return for the money he has invested.
