

Friday afternoon a message was received from the asylum at Jamestown that Mrs. Ingeborg Bjornson was critically ill with pneumonia. Her son Otto and daughters—Mrs. Falla and Mrs. Bradshaug—left on the belated train Saturday, hoping to see her once more while still alive. But the old lady expired just about the time the train pulled into Jamestown. It was a sad little group that returned to Mose Monday, bringing the remains of their mother. The funeral will be held Wednesday from the church north of Mose.
