
A Serious Accident.

Mr. A. L. Breckenridge met with a very serious accident, last Wednesday evening, which will lay him up for some time to come. He was riding after some stock upon a mule, and when going at a pretty fast rate of speed the mule stumbled, throwing Mr. B. to the ground directly on his face and the mule in its fall came down directly on one of Mr. B.'s legs, breaking it just at the ankle. When the accident happened Mr. B. was something over a mile from his house, and there being no help at hand, was obliged to crawl almost a mile on his hands and knees before he was enabled to make his wife hear his cries, and she came to his assistance. Dr. Philip was immediately called, and with Mr. E. H. Badger as assistant went out and attended to the broken limb, and at last reports Mr. B. was resting as comfortably as could be expected.
