

---

From an extensive ride through parts of Cass and Steele counties, we can truthfully say that we do not remember ever to have seen crops, taken as a whole, look better than they do at this season of the year. Here and there may be found fields where the high winds of the early spring did damage, but these are the exceptions. While as yet the grain is not suffering, still a good rain would be very beneficial.