—Carpenters were sent up by the railway company the latter part of last week to fix up the loading platform at this place. They lengthened the platform out considerably, but left the approach so steep that it would have been an impossibility for a team to get up on the platform with a fair sized load of wheat. The citizens took the matter in hand this week, bought the necessary lumber and fixed the approach up in good shape, and the platform is now in good condition, and ready for any farmer who wishes to load his grain.
