

—Bert Sbaw, while out hunting last Monday, met with an accident which might have proven fatal. He shot and killed a duck which fell in the water, and in going in after it he stepped in an old well at the edge of the pond, going into the water clear to his neck. He succeeded in getting out, however, and was fortunate enough, also, to secure his gun which he dropped into the water. It was a cold bath, and a narrow escape.
