—Mr. J. J. Wamberg received a telegram, last Saturday, from Minneapolis, where his wife is visiting, announcing that their youngest child, the little boy who has been a sufferer for so long from an abscess in the side, was much worse and not expected to live. He started on the same day for Minneapolis, and on Monday a telegram was received from Mr. Wamberg by Mr. James McCollom, to the effect that the little child had died on Sunday afternoon. Little Lloyd was nearly three years of age, and for about eighteen months had been almost a constant sufferer. They had taken him to Minneapolis, thinking to have an operation performed which might relieve him, but blood poison set in a short time after their arrival, and his sufferings were terrible until death kindly came to his relief.
