Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, at the Presbyterian church, occurred the funeral of the little babe, Allen Eliza, of Mr. and Mrs. William Crawford. The little one was only five months old, but young as it was it had to heed the summons of death. It had been having whooping cough for some time but nothing serious developed until pneumonia set in and it was not able to stand both. It died Friday morning early. The services were conducted by the pastor and interment was made in the Courtenay cemetery. Another little one, aged six, is very low with the same trouble, but at this writing it is thought with careful watching
