

A. J. Dennis returned on Thursday from Warner, Alberta, where he went this spring with his horses with the intention of remaining during the summer and breaking up a chunk of that country. He found it so wet up there that he was unable to work for some time and then when it stopped raining he was unable to get feed for his horses and decided to give it up for a bad job. He says he will now remain in Courtenay. Mrs. Dennis also returned the first of the week.
