

Jamestown had something of a sensation the other day when the father of a young lady who was standing before the minister to become the bride of a young man from Cooperstown tried to take a shot at the groom before the minister had time to pronounce the words which united them for life. The bride is the daughter of Dr. Barton, of Sanborn, and was about to be married to Charles S. Gillespie, of Cooperstown, when Dr. Barton leveled a revolver at the head of a groom and it was only through the prompt action of O. A. Boynton, in whose house the ceremony was being performed, that prevented a most lamentable tragedy. After Dr. Barton had been turned over to the sheriff the ceremony was performed without any further objections being raised.
