A year ago last spring Mrs. James Burroughs, of Hankinson, attempted to destroy her entire family by administering poison to them. The baby died from the drug, but the others recovered. The woman was later adjudged insane and was sent to the asylum at Jamestown. The last of the following December she was discharged from the asylum as cured, and returned to her family. She seemed all right for a time, but the knowledge of the loss of her child by her own hand worried and grieved her, and of late she has seemed to break down, and finally she demanded that she be returned to the asylum, as she was fearful of again seeking the lives of her family. A few days ago she was before the county court and told her sad story and was again committed to the asylum.
