

Joe Thiering is making extensive repairs to the front of his house, due to a runaway. A team dashed straight for his door and without saying by your leave went through his front fence, across his newly made lawn and on to the porch, tearing down one pillar and a part of the cornice, besides doing other damage. The damage was considerable when all repairs have been completed and the work painted.—Capital.