
Dies at Bordulac

News reached here that a young man by the name of Dick Nugent died at Bordulac Monday from the effects—it is supposed—of poisoning by carbolic acid, presumably administered by himself. He was only twenty-three years old and was in the employ of Dick Boyle, a livery barn owner of that town, at the time of his death.

The cause for the act is not generally known but it is rumored that a unhappy love affair figured in the untimely demise of the unfortunate young man.
