
Wm. Wiechmann had the misfortune to have a horse fall in an old well which had become partly uncovered by the action of the wind and snow and the horse, falling a distance of some forty feet or more, was evidently killed outright. It was a valuable animal and said to be worth over $250. and Mr. Wiechmann feels the loss very keenly.
