

The Cooperstown school closes to-day after ten months of successful schooling under the guidance of Prof. Hodge and Mrs. Will Carleton. The scholars have made good progress in their studies during the past and the parents seem to be well satisfied with the advance of their children. Both teachers and scholars have well earned their vacation. In another year from now it will be necessary for the board to hire at least one more teacher, judging from the number of young children growing up. Cooperstown is a great town for children and Mrs. Carleton has had about all she could handle in her room the past term.
