

---

John Wick, a farmer living nine miles south of town, fell down and dislocated his wrist a week or so ago. A little boy out at his place was leading some horses out to water, when the animals commenced to kick up and in jumping towards the horses to help the boy he slipped and fell backwards, putting out his hands to save himself with the above results, Daniels Syvertson thought he had pulled the bones back into place but it seems he didn't and Mr. Wick came to town Monday to have the doctors operate on it. The ligaments were all grown together, and Doctors Kerr and Bergstrom had to break them apart and reset the bones again.

---