

Wednesday night there were two runaways in this vicinity. As Geo. Kerber was coming from work one of his horses slipped its bridle and started to run and then the other three started to run also. George stayed in the wagon for a while, but having no control of the horses they ran into a ditch and quite near a wire fence, so he jumped out. The horses ran into the yard and stopped. No damage was done. Later on in the evening Mr. Hogness was hauling some wood on a stone boat. In some way he got himself and the horse tangled up in some loose barb wire. The horse became frightened and started to run. Mr. Hogness freed himself as quickly as possible and then let the horse go. George Kerber caught him. Mr. Hogness' hand was hurt and he is a little lame. He had a very narrow escape.
