

---

—Messrs. R. D. Stewart and George T. McLean are erecting a house over their wind mill, with a view to shutting off the wind when it becomes too violent for the good of the mill. By the way, the mill works finely, and runs the feed mill which they have erected with the utmost ease. On the first day, when trying the machine, they ground over fifty bushels of feed.

---