During the storm Wednesday Dr. Philip, in trying to steer clear of snow drifts, drove his horse into the excavation for a cellar made several years ago just south of Wamberg & Jacobson's store. The hole had become filled with snow, and the horse fell right into the hole and it being quite deep and the sides perpendicular the animal could get no footing to get out. A number of men were in the store and went to the doctor's assistance, and with the aid of a rope and the assistance of the men the animal was extricated. After getting the horse out he was so exhausted from lunging that he was scarcely able to stand up.
