

have to ford in mid-winter.

Andrew Larson, who lived on N. W.  $\frac{1}{4}$  Sec. 12, Gallatin township, was found by one of the neighbors sick in bed and in a helpless condition. Medical assistance was summoned, but it was too late and he died Feb. 1st. He had been ailing with consumption for several years and it is supposed that La grippe set in which helped the sudden demise, for that malady has been running, in a mild form, around here lately. Deceased was a bachelor and lived alone, in the neighborhood of 40 or 45 years old.
