
Jamestown Capital: Elvis Heath of Montpelier died at midnight at the city hospital where he was brought the day before for typhoid fever. He had been sick for three weeks prior but managed to be about much of the time until the last week. After being brought here his temperature ran to 106 and he rapidly grew worse.

Mr. Heath was one of the old residents of the vicinity of Montpelier and his death will be regretted by many. He leaves a wife and one child who have the sympathy of all. Mr. Heath's brother of this city died last spring.
