

A sad accident occurred a few miles south of town on Tuesday, the 17th inst. Olef Lee, eldest son of John O. Lee, was engaged in sinking a well on Olef Martinson's place. The drill struck a rock and young Lee went down to dig it out, but when half way down was overcome by gas and fell from the bucket to the bottom of the well, breaking his neck. The gas was so strong in the well that no one dared go down and it was four hours before the body was recovered. The funeral was held last Friday in the church south of town.
