

Willie Root had a narrow escape from death the latter part of last week. He loaded a borrowed rifle and went out to test its shooting qualities, which proved very poor. The gun bursted and pieces flew in all directions. One came in contact with Mr. Root's head, inflicting a severe gash. Mr. Root informs us that they picked up sixty different pieces of the gun.