

Ole Selden had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday. He was applying belt dressing to the belt on the emery wheel while it was running at high speed, when his hand slipped and was partly caught in the wheel. In wrenching it loose he fell striking his head on the wheel, a deep gash being cut over one eye. His glasses were broken and it was feared the eye might have been injured. Druggist Gunderson dressed and bound up the wound as first aid and Ole then went to Coopers-town for further attention. He got out of the scrape very luckily, for he might easily have been badly injured.
