

A. B. DeForge writes from Minot that their son Llewelyn was operated on for appendicitis Friday, last week. Their little daughter, Iris Fay, also, has had two operations on her eye to restore the vision. She had been stone blind in it for three years, and the family, teachers, county nurses and state clinic doctors who examined her at stated periods never discovered her condition. The two children are recovering rapidly.