

Custer Stafney's new car and the shed it was in were destroyed by fire at noon Saturday. He was trying to start it when the engine backfired, the carburetor throwing gasoline over the greasy parts of the motor. It caught fire quickly and as the gas tank was over the engine there was no chance to save the car. It was covered by insurance.